

About REDbox

REDbox was born to contribute throughout the life cycle of research projects. By participating in the researchers' journey, we guarantee the execution of the collection, storage, and subsequent data analysis, always preserving the safety and privacy of the participants.

We put together human and technological resources to identify and resolve project inconsistencies. We create customized processes according to each environment and use strategic monitoring routines centered on the individual.

In real life, every project and implementation goes through unforeseen events. We at REDbox want researchers to be able to focus on the goals of their studies while solving the bureaucracy. We have a proactive team to support the development of scientific and technological projects, whether from public, private, or non-profit organizations.

Visit our website: <https://redbox.technology/>